PILES! PILES! PILES!

A Sure Cure Found at Last—No One Need Suffer!

A sure cure for blind, bleeding, itching and ulcerated piles has been discovered by Dr. Williams, (an Indian remedy,) called Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment. A single box has cured the worst chronic cases of twenty-five or thirty years standing. No one need suffer five minutes after applying this wonderful soothing medicine. Lotions, instruments and electrics do more harm than good. Williams' Ointment absorbs the tumors, allays the intense itching, (particularly at night after getting warm in bed,) acts as a poultice, gives instant and painless relief, and is prepared only for piles, itching of the private parts, and nothing else.

Read what the Hon. J. M. Coffinberry, of Cleveland, says about Dr. Williams' Pile Ointment: I have used scores of pile cures, and it affords me pleasure to say that I have never found anything which gave me such immediate and permanent relief as Dr. Williams' Indian Ointment.

For sale by George T. Wood or mailed on receipt of price, $1.

Skin Diseases Cured

By DR. FRAZIER'S MAGIC OINTMENT. Cure as if by magic, pimples, black head or grubs, blotches and eruptions on the face, leaving the skin clear, healthy and beautiful. Also cures itch, barber's itch, salt rheum, tetter, ringworm, scald head, chapped hands, sore nipples, sore lips, old obstinate ulcers and sores, &c.

SKIN DISEASE.

F. Drake, Esq., Cleveland, O., suffered beyond all description from a skin disease which appeared on his hands, head and face, and nearly destroyed his eyes. The most careful doctoring failed to help him, and after all had failed he used Dr. Frazier's Magic Ointment and was cured by a few applications.

The first and positive cure for skin diseases ever discovered.

Sent by mail on receipt of price, fifty cents

HENRY & CO., Sole Prop'rs, 62 Vesey Street, N. Y.

For blind, bleeding, itching or ulcerated piles. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure. Price $1, by mail. For sale by George T. Wood, druggist.

Dr. Frazier's Root Bitters.

Frazier's Root Bitters are not a dram-shop whisky beverage, but are strictly medicinal in every sense. They act strongly upon the liver and kidneys, keep the bowels open and regular, make the weak strong, heal the lungs, build up the nerves and cleanse the blood and system of every impurity.

For dizziness, rush of blood to the head tending to apoplexy, dyspepsia, fever and ague, dropsy, pimples and blotches, scrofulous humors and sores, tetter, ring worm, white swelling, erysipelas, sore eyes and for young men suffering from weakness or debility caused from imprudence, and to females in delicate health, Frazier's Root Bitters are especially recommended.

Dr. Frazier: I have used two bottles of your Root Bitters for dyspepsia, dizziness, weakness and kidney disease, and they did me more good than the doctors and all the medicine I ever used. From the first dose I took I began to mend, and I am now in perfect health, and feel as well as I ever did. I consider your medicine one of the greatest blessings.

MRS. M. MARTIN, Cleveland, O.

Sold by George T. Wood at $1 per bottle.

Clever Crows.

I have not said any thing about the crows, which are a feature of Yezo, and one which the colonists would willingly dispense with. There are millions of them, and in many places they break the silence of the silent land with a Babel of noisy discords. They are everywhere and have attained a degree of most unpardonable impertinence, mingled with a cunning and sagacity which almost put them on a level with man in some circumstances. Five of them was so imprudent as to alight on two of my horses, and so be ferried across the Yurapugawa. In the inn garden I saw a dog eating a piece of carrion in the presence of several of these covetous birds. They evidently said a good deal to each other on the subject, and now and then one or two of them tried to pull the meat away from him, which he resented. At last a big, strong crow succeeded in tearing off a piece, with which he returned to the pine where the others were congregated, and, after much earnest speech, they all surrounded the dog, and the leading bird dexterously dropped the small piece of meat within reach of his mouth, when he immediately snapped at it, letting go the big piece unwisely for a second, on which two of the crows flew away with it to the pine, and with much flutter and hilarity they all ate, or rather gorged it, the deceived dog looking vacant and bewildered for a moment, after which he sat under the tree and barked at them inanely.

A gentleman told me that he saw a dog holding a piece of meat in like manner in the presence of three crows, which also vainly tried to tear it from him, and after a consultation he separated, two going as near as they dared to the meat, while the third gave his tail a bite sharp enough to make the dog turn round with a squeal, on which the other villians seized the meat, and the three fed triumphantly upon it on the top of a wall. In many places they are so aggressive as to destroy crops, unless they are protected by netting. They assemble on the sore backs of horses and pick them into holes, and are mischievous in many ways. They are very late in going to roost, and are early astir in the morning, and are so bold that they often came "with many a stately flirt and flutter" into the veranda where I was sitting. I never watched an assemblage of them for any length of time without being convinced that there was a Nestor among them to lead their movements. Along the sea-shore they are very amusing, for they "take the air" in the evening, seated on sandbanks facing the wind with their mouths open. They are threatening to devour the settle, and a crusade is just now being waged against them, but their name is legion.—Miss Bird's "Unbeaten Tracks in Japan."

A WOMAN was buying tea at a place in Washington where, on certain days, diamonds, rings and purses of money are given away as prizes in a certain number of packages sold. The other day a lady stepped forward and invested her dollar. "I'll give you $5 for your package before opening," said the clerk. She declined. It was opened. There were only fifteen cents in it. She bought another package, the same offer made and declined. There were only fifteen cents in that one. She bought a third package. "I'll give you $35." She hesitated, then consented. It was opened and found to contain $500 in gold pieces. This attracted attention, and the buying of $1 packages became very brisk. A gentleman followed the lady to her hotel and asked her name. "Mrs. —," said the clerk. It was the wife of the proprietor of the tea store.

Patti as a Conversationalist.

Born in Spain, of Italian parents, educated in America and passing her mature life in the various capitals of Europe, Madame Patti is a cosmopolite. She speaks English like an educated American; French like a Parisian; the beauty of her Italian all who have heard her know; German and Spanish are equally familiar to her, and she can talk with a Russian in his own tongue. She even asserts that she can speak Welsh, and it can at least be attested that she fearlessly pronounces the name of her postoffice in Wales, which no one on this side of the Atlantic would attempt. It is curious to hear her carrying on a polyglot conversation, talking business to one person, art to another and small talk to a third, and interpreting from one tongue to another with absolute command of the idioms of each. The visitor calling after her breakfast hour will probably find a good deal of this polyglot conversation going on in animated fashion. It takes a long while for M. Franchi, Madame Patti's business man, to get the arrangements for the day clearly understood, but the elderly Frenchman presently takes his leave, kissing the Diva's hand with courtly obeisance, and then business is for the time dismissed. The conversation naturally drifts to music. Madame Patti understands her own position as an artist perfectly well. She knows that she is the best singer in the world, for it is to that that her life has been devoted, and the consciousness of her power is one great secret of her achievement. She does not lead the talk to herself, but if you speak of her singing she will talk of it with you without the slightest affectation. Her position is simply taken for granted, and therefore she can speak of other artists with the appreciation and the calm judgment of one who is quite beyond the reach of professional jealousy. Like all thorough artists she has an out-poken contempt for everything that looks like charlatany and a warm recognition for every honest achievement, in however small a way. Like other thorough artists, also, she likes appreciation, and if you have given her praise which she knows to be intelligent and just, she will thank you with as much apparent earnestness as though she had not heard the same thing a hundred times before.

It is instructive as well as entertaining to talk with such a woman about music. She has heard all the famous singers of the past quarter of a century and of them all she says that Sontag was her ideal. But this she scarcely needs to say, for those who heard Sontag must find her memory recalled by Patti, and the descriptions of Sontag's method that we read in the books might be applied with scarcely a change to her successor.—Philadelphia Times.

A Lively Adventuress.

A young woman who was brought up at Bradford, Canada, without any knowledge of her father and mother was finally taken to an insane asylum, from which she escaped and became an adventuress of the dime novel character. First she figured as an "escaped nun," and found lecturing in that capacity very profitable. Then she was a persecuted missionary from China, where she had achieved immense success in building up the Lord's kingdom. After this she tried to elope with a fourteen-year-old boy, the heir of considerable property. Then she declined into a consumptive, deceiving, by means of a red chemical hid in her cheek, the physicians themselves, who thought she was subject to hemorrhages. She has been a frequent guest at Rideau Hall, the residence of Lord Lorne, and was detected just in time to prevent her marriage with a rich and brilliant lawyer of Ottawa.—Detroit Free Press.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 15, 1882.

TERMS:—The EVENING BULLETIN is published daily, and served free of postage at 6 cents per week; 25 cents per month; 75 cents per three months; $1.50 per six months, and $3 per year, payable in advance.

THE EVENING BULLETIN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION IN THIS CITY, CHESTER AND ABERDEEN, OHIO, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER PUBLISHED IN MAYSVILLE.

The four judges before whom the Guiteau bill of exceptions was argued are said to be unable to agree and it will be necessary to call in a fifth judge to reach a decision.

SOME of the lawyers at Washington are of the opinion that the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, will set aside the verdict of the criminal court, in the Guiteau case and grant a new trial.

THE unparalleled announcement has been made that "the Republican party has the ability to control its own destiny regardless of the machinery of office." Why not abolish the spoils system then?

UNDER the provisions of the River and Harbor Bill, there will be expended on Kentucky watercourses $261,500. This congressional district will get the following: Big Sandy, $15,000; Tug Fork of Big Sandy, $5,000, and the Lower Fork of the same stream, $5,000. For the improvement of these watercourses we are indebted to the Hon. E. C. Phister, who has labored earnestly in that interest, and has secured a larger appropriation than was generally hoped would be made.

At last, after nineteen long years, partial justice has been done General Fitz John Porter, the President having remitted the continuous portion of his sentence, forever disqualifying him from holding any office of trust or profit under the Government of the United States. There remains now no legal obstacle to congressional action. It should be taken promptly and justice done where justice is due. There is no ground for a political issue in the case, and no fair minded person will be found to object to a speedy disposal of it by congress.

Mr. Cox, is authority for the statement in a recent speech on revenue reform that the demands through congress upon the United States treasury over and above the necessary expenses of government aggregate $730,000,000 with $16,000,000 for public buildings. These demands were all made in the hope of obtaining a share of the surplus $150,000,000 which will remain in the treasury at the end of the present fiscal year. Drawn by this attractive bait and the known tendency of the republican majority to loosely construe the powers granted by the constitution, the lobbyists have swarmed to Washington in as great numbers as during the Grant regime. The question which now arises is, had this money better be in the pockets of the people from whence it came or in the pockets of the lobbyists?

Ireland.

Turnpike Sale.

The Hill City Turnpike was sold last Saturday to Mr. J. C. Owens for $1,540. It is Mr. Owens' intention to put the road in thorough repair, rebuild the bridge across Limestone Creek, broken down by John Larkin's team, and open the road to the public as a first-class thoroughfare.

THE Bonanza, on Saturday evening brought thirty-four horses entered for the races at the Trotting course this week, among them the stable of Alden Goldsmith of New York, and the stables of other turfmen equally as favorably known. Fifteen more came by the Bostona, Sunday evening and others have since arrived by rail. The recent rains have not injured the track in any way and provided the weather continues favorable it will be in the best condition. The hotels are rapidly filling up and visitors continue to pour in from all quarters, many of whom will, it is probable, will be obliged to seek accommodation in private families or at Aberdeen. Altogether the outlook is very encouraging for a highly successful meeting of the Trotting Association, financially and in every other respect.

MRS. M. W. COULTER has reopened the Hill House and is prepared to receive boarders on the most reasonable terms. Mrs. Coulter is favorably known as a landlady and is sure to render satisfactory service to her guests. Meals will be served at all hours during the day.

How to Destroy the Angle Worm.

We extract from the Elmira (N. Y.) Free Press report of the Tobacco Club, that part pertaining to tobacco. It gives a valuable suggestion as to the destruction of the angle worm:

John Schuyler—I would like to know how to keep angle worms from working in plant beds. I am told they can be picked off in the evening, or early in morning.

George Chamberlain—I think, by letting the beds dry off quite dry, the worms will go deeper in the ground.

President Miller—Salt, applied early in the spring, would have been good as a preventive, but I would not put it on now the seed is sown.

John Strouse—My father thought he saved a bed by putting on water in which refused tobacco had been soaked. He thought the liquid good for plants, and kept the angle worms from working.

George Chamberlain—Such a dressing will not injure Mr. Schuyler's plants, and would be liable to help destroy or drive the worms away.

G. A. Goff, Jr.—Will it do to apply liquid manure when the plants are so young?

President Miller—It would need to be weak.

John Schuyler—I put manure in an old bag, and put this in a barrel, and stir up or roll over the bag, and the strength will pass out into the liquid, and when the strength is out, add more; also, put in fertilizer.

G. A. Goff, Jr.—Is there any difference in results if plants are watered in the middle of the day, or just at morning and evening. I usually water mine at noon.

President Miller—I water my plants at any time, but think watering in the heat of the day causes the ground in the bed to bake.

Charles Cooper—I think the angle worms work worse when beds are watered at night, as it leaves the soil much in the same condition as if there had been a rain, and the worms work worse after rains.

John Schuyler—I have some sash on my hot bed having a cloudy or dusty appearance, so much so that the light does not pass through these easily, and I find plants grow better under these than where the glass is clear. Plants are much larger where so shaded.

President Miller—I have some plants with glass so clouded, and they are better than when clear. I like to have the glass covered for a few days after the seed is first sown, as it does not dry off and sun burn.

George Chamberlain—Many beds are sun burned by letting the light strike them too strong at first.

Chas. Cooper—It is well to throw carpets over the glass for a day, so as to shade the tender plants.

THE WIDOW'S STRATAGEM.

The widow Brown lived at the end of the street.
In a house of her own, snug and clean;
While in a grim lodging just over the way
There resided the Bachelor Green.

Now, widow B. looked upon Bachelor G.
With a heartily, covetous eye,
And she said to herself: "To win Mr. G.
I must really most earnestly try."

The bachelor he met the widow full oft,
And quite frequently thought, when alone;
"That widow would make the most sensible wife
Of all women I have known."

But Green was bashful, he still held aloof
From the prize he was anxious to take;
Whilst wondered she still what course to pursue,
When a raid on his heart she should make.

Till the widow one day, in crossing a field,
Met with poor Mr. Green at the stile, They stood as they met, one each side of the fence,
And pleasantly talked for awhile.

Now the bachelor felt the occasion was fine
To disclose to the widow his mind;
Whilst she mentally vowed the capture of Green,
Ere the evening sun had declined.

Still they spoke of the neighbors, the crops and the heat,
But the subject so close to each heart,
Neither one could approach; so sunset came on,
And 'twas time that the couple should part.

She mounted the steps and began to descend
Ere he could enough courage command,
To step bashfully up, and bashfully say—
"Mistress B. won't you give me your hand?"

Now here was a chance, and it should be lost
No one knew if 'twould happen again;
The widow thus reasoned the moment she stood,
On the steps at the end of the lane.

So she modestly blushed; then said: "Mr. G.
You're so sudden—I never would guess That you'd ask of me—my hand? goodness me!
Have my hand? Oh! most certainly—yes!"

Mr. G. was as astonished on hearing this speech;
Still he felt the mistake not amiss,
And gladly surrendered—ay, growing so bold,
As his conquest to seal with a kiss.

Thus 'twas quickly arranged, and Mr. G.
sighed,
The pain of proposing out square,
'Tis years since the wedding—and yet they are shown
As the model matrimonial pair.

Grecian Beauty.

Much has been said in praise of Grecian beauty, and the men are handsome in every sense of the word. We might well imagine them to have been models of Phidias and Praxiteles. Their large eyes, black as jet, sparkle with glances of fire, while their long, silky eyelashes soften the expression and give a dreamy appearance of melancholy.
Their teeth are small, white and well set; a fine, regular profile, a pale, olive complexion, and a tall, elegant figure realize an accomplished type of distinction. As to the women, they seem to have left physical perfection to men; some possess fine eyes and hair, but as a rule they have bad figure, and some defects in the face generally spoil the features. It is among them, however, that the old, oriental customs are most strictly preserved; while the men are gradually undergoing the process of civilization, they, in a moral point of view, remain stationary, and are just as they were fifty years ago. It may, indeed, be said that, with the exception of Athens, the women possess no individual existence and count as nothing in society.
The men have reserved every privilege for themselves, leaving to their help-mates the care of the house and family.
In the towns, where servants are kept,
they are of the poorest class of peasants, who know nothing and receive miserable wages. The families are generally large —seven or eight little children—and demand a mother's constant attention.
The morning begins by directing the work of each servant, repeating the same thing a hundred times, scolding, screaming, and even beating them to be understood. In the evening, when the children are sleeping, if there remains some little time, the poor, worn-out mother sits down to her spinning wheel to spin silk, to sew or knit, or if it be summer time, to look after her cocoons, happy if she has not to do the work of her incompetent servant over again.

ALL the original MSS. of Longfellow's works, both in prose and verse, have been preserved and bound by him.—

Patented February 15, 1881.

Indispensible to Merchants Shippers
And Producers.

The outside frame of this carrier contains five trays, held in place by fasteners at end of case, as seen in cut. These trays are constructed in reversible halves. The above cut shows one whole tray filled ready to be placed in case, each egg resting in its cardboard socket in such a manner as to be readily counted, candied, or transferred from tray to tray, or case to case, without rehandling.
For cold storage this case will store 60 dozen with racks made to receive the half trays, hence this is the cheapest storage case manufactured, saving largely in space.
The manner of holding the eggs on end prevents oscillation, adding, or breakage, and adds greatly to their freshness when carried long in
